court of law, but would receive anything, hearsay or not.

Kempner went on to say that when his friends came in and told him that the police were taking down his lithographs, he was very much surprised. Many thought he had withdrawn from the race, but his friends called a meeting that night and the action of the police was denounced.

"The next morning," continued Mr. Kempner, "I went out myself, and right around the corner in Fifth street, near where I live, I saw two ward delectives in citisen's clothes coming out of a barber shop. They were Detectives Hopp and Mallon. At the same time I noticed the proprietor with my lithograph in his hand.

"I asked him what he was going to do with it, and he said the policeman had ordered him to take it down. I followed the two detectives, and saw them go into Tollmeyer's grocery store, at 466 Fifth Street.

"When I reached the place, somebody

"I went in and Mr. Tollmeyer said that he had taken the lithograph down at the request of the officers.

"I immediately went to Police Head-quarters and complained of this action to Supt. Byrnes, and he told me he would investigate it. Afterwards I wrote him a letter making a formal charge against the two detectives.

"I received a reply from the Superintendent, saying that he had no authority to try and punish the offenders, and thereupon I concluded not to press the charges, and wrote to Supt. Byrnes to that effect."

Mr. Kempner read this letter, which was written on Nov. 9, for the benefit of the Commisties. In it he told the Superintendent that he did not want to press matters, because he was convinced that a trial before the Commissioners sould be a mere farce, and that the officers had already shown by their action that they were receiving protection.

ficers had already shown by their action that they were receiving protection rom hisher quarters than the captain or superintendent.

He added that the police in uniform list went around among the storecepers and asked for the removal of its lithographs, and then the detectives notizens' clothes went around and ordered them out. They took the lithographs down themselves. The Tammany eader in that district was George F. Roesch.

"Oh, it is the custom, I believe. I mink I have seen the handsome features of the District-Attorney in lithographs."

This caused some merriment among he auditors, and Mr. Nicoli blushed.

Mr. Kempner admitted that he usually used things hot for his opponents when he ran as a candidate, and that he had brimerly ran as a candidate in that district.

William Hopf, who has a wine shop at 15 Sixth street, was the next witness. Hr. Kempner said the witness could not peak English very well and he offered o act as interperter.
Hopf said he had lived in the district for twenty years, and had known Mr. Kempner for about five years.

He said that Frank Kelly, the Tammany capitain in that district, brought in a lot of men whom the witness believed to be repeaters, and who were challenged, but the protests of the Kepublican Inspectors were not allowed.

"About two o'clock in the afternoon," said the witness, "one of the Tammany inspectors came up to Kelly and said, Kempner is getting the best of it."

"Kelly swore considerably and went out. He came back shortly with a flock of voters. He brought them in one by one to vote, but I challenged them. They were not allowed to vote.

"Kelly was very angry, and said to me and the Republican inspector: 'Till flx you, I was appointed by Commissioner Martin, and I don't take any orders from you."

"That's all."
Senator Cantor came in during this witnesses testimony and asked him a few questions after Mr. Nicoll had finished. Mergler said he had volunteered his testimony to-day and he had not told his story to any one before to-day.

Mr. Sutherland said at this point that he had several other witnesses to examine in the same line, but they were not in court, so he would call Gen. C. H. T. Collis to the witness stand.

Gen. Collis said that he had always taken a great interest in election matters at the polls. This was in the election of 1892, when he was appointed a watcher in the Thirty-second Election District of the Second Assembly District. This was in Oliver street.

"I went down then," said Gen. Collis.

During the day I went around to the polling place in Oxford street, around the corner, and found the same state of things. The Republican watcher was perfectly helpless.

Davis listened to the testimony for the first hour after the opening, and then Mr. McIntyre came in and took his place. They said they intended to take no part in the proceedings, but were simply there as spectators.

Thomas F. Harrington, Republican watcher in the election of 1831, told how a policeman refused to arrest a man who attempted to register illegally in the Twenty-third Assembly District of the Second Assembly District in that year.

"This man gave as his address 358 Vater street, which I knew to be a icant lot. I immediately challenged im and called on the policeman presen to arrest him.

McLaughlin has been arrested several times before, but the latest charge against him has caused great indignation. On Tuesday last McLaughlin, without provocation, arrested Frederick Bruckmuller, an aged and well-known resident of Clifton, while he was walking along the street at Tompkinsville. The old man was compelled to accompany the constable to a justice's office, but when they resched there the justice was not to be found.

Bruckmuller requested to be taken to the nearest Justice, but instead the constable tax to the nearest Justice, but instead the constable started to walk two miles with his prisoner over the steep hills at New Hrighton to the office of Constable Van Vechten. When the old man said that he could walk no further. Constable McLaughlin knocked his prisoner down. The assault was witnessed by a number of women, who brought several men to the assistance of the helpless old man. Al Camacho, the well-known sporting man, who is a deputy sheriff, arrested the constante and arraigned him before Justice Acker, at New Brighton. McLaughlin was held for further examination.

Bruckmuller is reported to be in a

A strike would affect 1,500 men in this city and seriously disturb the tailoring business of the country.

The Merchant Tailors' Association, numbering some eighteen of the leading Fifth avenue firms, has appointed a committee to meet an arbitration committee of the journeymen on Monday morning John is Lennon, Secretary of the Journeymen's Association, said that the leading men of the organization did not want a strike, but on the other hand they were not disposed to submit to a 15 per cent. cut. The only argument offered by the employers for the reduction is that owing to the hard times their customers expect to get cheaper clothes. The men are getting little enough pay as it is.

"Besides myself and Mr. Ronzone, there are my son, J. Lawrence Ridgway, J. A. Studwell, William Wilson and Walter McKle. Mr. McKle is in business in lower Broadway. Messrs. Studwell and Wilson I do not know. They are friends of Mr. Ronzone, and wealthy, but whether they reside in New York I cannot say.

"The idea was suggested during one of Mr. Ronzone's visits to Paris. He thought the pretty glass booths which he saw on the curbs there would be an improvement on the ramshackle structures to be seen here, and believing that he could get the privilege of erecting them under "L' stairways, where they would not be an obstruction, he organized the company and had the bill introduced.

Justice Ehrlich signed the order of Drs. and Bernard Sachs, of 21 East Sixty-near street.

As Sternfels was leaving the cafe in charge of the policeman he met Lawyer Robert J. Haire.

Col. Haire had never seen the man before, so far as he knew, but Sternfels recognized him as a lawyer, and said to him: "I am being taken to Bloomingdale Asylum, but I am not insane. I probably will not be able to communicate with any one after I reach the asylum, and as I know you are a lawyer, I wish you would take the necessary legal steps to get me out."

Lawyer Haire was unable to gain any accurate information regarding Sternfels, and decided that the best course was to obtain a writ of habeas corpus. When the return of the writ was made this morning, Sternfels was brought to court, where he was met by a gentleman, who was said to be his brother, who is in the fertilizing business in Burling slip. They talked for some time. At the conclusion of their conversation the stranger refused to tell who he was. Lawyer Haire said to an "Evening World" reporter that he knew nothing of the case, except what has already been stated.

Mr. Haire asked that Justice Ingraham adjourn the hearing of the argument until he had time to confer with Dr. E. C. Spitzka, the insanity expert.

Justice Ingraham granted the request and Sternfels was taken back to the asylum.

audienly dropped out of sight and a curious pedestrian who looked to see where it had gone hastily retreated when he saw the yawning space beneath him. A policeman was warned, and he in turn notified some workmen on the west side of Broadway, in Tenth street. They, however, paid no attention to it.

The next policeman who came on that post nearly walked into the cavity and thus it was discovered.

The side of the sewer main is completely gone and the water main is leaking because its support has caused it to bend. The pipes connecting the fire hydrant were snapped off and several gas pipes were badly bent.

A fence of boards placed on barrels has been built around the hole and Policeman O'Mara is on duty warning truckmen not to venture to near to the edges.

truckmen not to venture to near to the edges.

If the break in the sewer main had been a few feet further west, the Broadway cable conduits would have tumbled into the cavity and the entire system stopped.

It is a mystery where the sand has sone to. It is believed that it will block other sewers in the vicinity and cause serious disturbance.

A gang of workmen were busily engaged in bracing up the water mains and other pipes in the excavation when an "Evening World" reporter visited the spot this morning.

"Ryan, who was acquainted with Mc-Laughlin, a watchman in the stable, took me into the office. McLaughlin was in charge, and there was no one else in the place when we arrived.

"I was kept a prisoner, locked up in the office all night, and was assaulted by McLaughlin in the presence of Ryan, who did not interfere.

"Towards morning Ryan begged me not to betray him to any one.

"He proposed to me that we take furnished rooms downtown and live together. I promised that I would in order to gain my liberty.

"As soon as I gotl home I told my sister Mary of my terrible treatment, as a result of which I have been confined to my bed and unable to help myself until now. That is the reason why I had not made a complaint before.

"When I recovered sufficiently to get about, my sister and I went to court last Tuesday and asked for warrants."

The warrants were given to Court Officer Kinge, who arrested Monahan last night at 10 o'clock at One Hundred and Third street and Third avenue.

When arraigned in court this morning the prisoner pleaded not guilty, and was held in $1,000 bail for examination next Monday. In the mean time Officer Klinge hopes to apprehend the other two men.
